Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Decisions of the Department of the Interior in Cases Relating to Pension Claims, Vol. 3: And to the Laws of the United States Granting and Governing Pensions; With Appendix This volume is confined to departmental rulings made by the present Assistant Secretary of the Interior. It differs from the volumes that precede it in presenting a line of consistent decisions involving legal questions, and in evincing a broader spirit of interpretation. This distinction of the book establishes its chief value as an accurate guide in the administration of the pension laws. The bestowal of pensions was authorized by the Government's self assumed obligation to care for those who should incur either disease or injury by reason of line of duty in the military service. Such being the foundation of the pension system, it becomes of first importance to ascertain the breadth and limitations of that line. When considering this fundamental point, at the beginning of this administration, the Assistant Secretary was confronted by the narrow and, obviously, erroneous ruling which had been made, June...
