Not illustrated. 1853 Excerpt: . . . of all, however, is the news from the colonel, just published by the Asiatic Society. He writes, that he prepared and sent off some months ago a careful narrative of his proceedings, but the mail was plundered on its way oy the Anezeh Arabs, and the whole of the foreign correspondence distributed among these marauders, who are said to be now wearing the unknown Babylonish characters as amulets. In the brief account since forwarded, we road of the discovery of additional historical records, which fill up gaps in the former results; and of a splendid rain, named Abu Shahrein, in Southern Chaldea, apparently full of marbles and sculptures. Thus another mine of antiquities appears to be opening; but, besides this, Colonel Rawlinson describes what he calls his real treasurehouse of discovery; he says, I have found fragments of alphabets, syllabaria, and explanations of ideographic signs. In...
